NEWS:

Salish language camp growth reflects increasing interest

"We can't say often enough how important our tribal elders are." That was one of the things that Salish Language Camp co-organizer Shirley Trahan had to say in an interview at the camp last Thursday afternoon.

Earl Old Person inducted into Montana Indian Hall of Fame

Chief Earl Old Person was selected as the third "songkeeper." He joins Perry Pretty Paint (Crow) and Johnny Arlee (Salish) as the first three inductees to date.

Ronan Boys & Girls Club suffers windstorm damage

A strong microburst caused considerable damage at the Boys & Girls Club building in Ronan Friday evening. Around 9:15 p.m., just minutes after teens and program aides left the building a storm kicked up winds in excess of 50 miles an hour.

Another Cobell historical accounting hearing

The federal judge handling the Cobell trust fund case will hold another hearing this afternoon. Judge James Robertson plans to start a trial into the Interior Department's historical accounting in October. With the plaintiffs and the government in disagreement on a number of issues, he has called a series of status conferences to sort out some of disputes.

Navajo baseball player leaves big impression

After just six games with the Boston Red Sox, some fans are ready to put Jacoby Ellsbury, the first Navajo major league baseball player, in the hall of fame.
